Growing North Cariboo Society is a not-for-profit society formed in January 2014 as a sister organization to the North Cariboo Agricultural Marketing Association (dba FARMED). Growing North Cariboo Society plans to bring people together from different areas, agencies, and sectors across the North Cariboo region to identify barriers to health with a focus on food security.

The Growing North Cariboo Society is overseen by a volunteer group of persons interested and dedicated to increasing awareness of the benefits of accessing local food in having sustainable, healthy and viable communities, building capacity and improving the linkages between rural and urban settings.
